

The next morning was spent waking up, which took a considerable amount of time. Before leaving that afternoon, the area was made SAMI clean, and by 1700 the Rampart range was once again returned to peace and quiet.

WATUSI VILLAGE TALK (or What's Going On Down There)

Please Remove Your Shoes When Entering My Room

Bring your sunglasses next time you visit our sqd. area. We now have 3 buffers per sqd and we have really been laying it on thick - the wax, this is - close to 10 gallons this month. Results: Colonel Ferrari, the Wing AOC, says, " 24th Sqd has the shiniest floors in the Wing!" Good show, 24th!

Please Keep the Door Closed

Another new item is the refrigerator in our Boodle Room. It seems that the water bill became astronomical because everyone was cooling the cans of soft drink by running water in their sinks. Major Barmettler has reported an interesting objection brought up by, as he called them, "merchants of gloom." The refrigerator should go because it will lead to ptomaine poisoning. Oh really? Major B. has given us the real reason, however, for our refrigerator. With the profits we get from the sale of cokes, we can contribute more to charity organizations (incidentally, it is a known fact that 24th contributed over $90 to the Community Fund last semester - nearly twice that of the next highest sqd contribution).

Phase Three and Pistol Qualification

Recently begun in the Wing is Phase Three, the third portion of the 1st classman's training involving more emphasis on discussion at the table as well as the 4th sitting at ease. Fuzz Mack, the sqd training officer, has graciously consented to fill you all in on this program in the next issue. Pistol qualification with the .38 crew weapon is coming up shortly and 24th intends to "put out" to the utmost to win this competition, especially since Maj. is an expert shot himself.

Officer Participation Program

I've been keeping a scrapbook in the Air Power Room of all the activities engaged in between officers and cadets of the 24th and, noting that some groups are more active than others, I put up a suggestion sheet and the results were as follows: 1. Invite officers to the table to discuss the topics of the week 2. Invite officers' wives to the table to discuss topics of interest 3. Invite officers' daughters to the table to discuss topics of interest 4. Invite officers' wives and daughters to sqd twist party 5. Invite ourselves to officers' twist parties etc, etc. As you can see, it is practically impossible to achieve anything with suggestion sheets. But, they sure are fun.
